

MANY VIRGINIA TOWNS HEAR DEMOCRATIC PUBLIC SPEAKERS

Flood and Strode Get Best of Allen and Brent in Joint Debate.

MR. TUCKER AT STAUNTON

Does Not Mention Judge Mann's Name—Glass at Houston. Mann at Bedford.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
LOVINGSTON, Va., September 27.—In the presence of an audience which taxed the courtesies to its utmost capacity, the hottest political debate held in this county in many years took place here to-day, Congressman Hal Flood of Appomattox, and Senator Aubrey E. Strode of Amherst, appearing for the Democrats, and Colonel S. Brown Allen, of Staunton, and Captain Frank P. Brent, the nominee of the Republican party for Superintendent of Public Instruction, for the opposite side.

Only five negroes were present. They sat in the gallery and took no part in the applause which greeted the Republican speakers.

At times the battle waxed warm between Flood and Allen, and when the former closed the debate for the Democrats he was severe in his exhortation of the Republicans.

Mr. Flood had upon him the burden of replying to both the Republican speakers, his colleague, Senator Strode, having opened the debate in a speech of twenty minutes. The Town District Representative was both vigorous and eloquent in replying to the bitter charges made against his party by Colonel Allen and Mr. Brent, and it was the general opinion that the Democrats got much the better of the controversy.

Senator Strode closed the debate by a speech of twenty minutes, in which he attacked the Republican platform, and declared that the Bureau of Insurance, which has cost the people $15,000 per year, should be abolished. Mr. Flood, in reply, discussed national issues at some length, charging that the Democratic party had abandoned many of its contentions made in former years, and that it might be expected shortly to throw aside the principles it now stands for and go to others. He claimed that the Republican party had through the Underwood Constitution established the public school system, and that it had later settled the debt question. He charged the Democrats with extravagance, and declared that the Bureau of Insurance, which has cost the people $15,000 per year, should be abolished.

Mr. Flood arose to reply to Colonel Allen, some one yelled, "Make the wool dry!" and it drew a more direct and vigorous arraignment of Republicanism not having been heard here in many years. Flood had been nettled by Allen's denunciation of Democracy, and he took his gloves off at the start.

The Republican chairman, L. W. Wood, started to introduce him, and he said: "I prefer Mr. White send the Democratic chairman to introduce me." He declared that he had never expected to hear a man with a white skin defend the Underwood Constitution, which he denounced along with its premises, declaring that he sought to disfranchise the white people of Virginia and to put the negroes in control of the government. He claimed that the Democrats had settled the public debt, and he characterized Colonel Allen's statement to the contrary as a barefaced assertion without any fact to back it up. Over this question he became engaged in a running colloquy with Colonel Allen, though Flood got all the best of it, and the old courthouse fairly shook with applause.

Cost of Insurance Department.
Answering Colonel Allen's criticism of the Democratic party for the establishment of a Bureau of Insurance, Mr. Flood said it did not cost the people a cent, and that the insurance companies had to pay the expenses the Republicans out of their love for corporations wanted the department abolished.

Mr. Flood reviewed political conditions in Virginia for the past twenty years, and closed with an appeal to his hearers to stand by the Democratic party.

Brent on Native Soil.

Captain Brent followed in a scholarly address of one hour and fifteen minutes. In which he proclaimed himself a Jeffersonian Democrat, denounced Bryan and attacked the present administration of the public school system in Virginia. His speech was largely along the lines of the one recently delivered in Richmond. It was listened to with close attention. This is Mr. Brent's native county, and his old friends received him with hearty handshakes, though his candidate will not come in on the Democratic to any considerable extent at the November election.

Flood Closes Debate.

Flood closed the debate in a speech of thirty minutes, in which he kept the Democratic contingent almost constantly cheering. Mr. Brent interrupted him several times on questions relating to the Department of Education, though the speaker was always of a pleasant nature.

The Democrats are greatly pleased at the result of the debate, and say it insures a heavy majority for their ticket in the county in November.

Tucker Pleases Staunton Crowd.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
STAUNTON, Va., September 27.—No mention of the name of his late opponent, Judge William H. Mann, was made here to-day by Hon. Harry St. George Tucker, who made an effective speech at Staunton.

At Bedford Judge Mann was warmly greeted and delivered a telling address.

Greatly disappointed because he could get no joint debate, Representative Glass spoke at Houston, together with Don P. Halsey. Republicans had their innings at Warrenton.

Yesterday's Political Events.

Representative Flood and Senator Strode engaged in a lively joint debate at Lovington, Nelson county, with S. Brown Allen and Captain Frank P. Brent.

Hon. Harry St. George Tucker made an effective speech at Staunton. At Bedford Judge Mann was warmly greeted and delivered a telling address.

Greatly disappointed because he could get no joint debate, Representative Glass spoke at Houston, together with Don P. Halsey. Republicans had their innings at Warrenton.

Democracy. He expressed great gratification at the handsome majority Staunton and Augusta had given him, and said he owed them a greater debt than any other part of the State.

Criticism of Mann.
Mr. Tucker said he felt sure some day he would be able to see what attitude he was going to assume toward his late opponent in the primary, whose public record he had criticized in the primary campaign. He had a right to make these criticisms, he thought it a poor thing to throw out such matters within the party, but the man who could not take defeat gracefully was not worthy of the confidence of the people, and no man who was not to speak for himself, but to speak for the Democratic party and its nominees and to do battle for their success.

Having announced his cordial acceptance of the decision of the party, he gave a discussion of the issues before the people, and exposed the fallacy of the Republican promises, as compared with the actual achievements of the Democratic party in control of the State. Mr. Tucker elicited great applause in analyzing the Republican State platform, especially his endorsement of the Aldrich tariff bill before it was enacted.

Tucker's Remarks.

Mr. Tucker said in part: As a candidate for the nomination for the high office of Governor of Virginia in the recent primary, I beg the outlet to return my most hearty thanks to the people of this county and the city of Staunton, who so loyally stood by me in the recent contest. To the people of Augusta and the city of Staunton I owe probably more than to any other people in the State. To them I am indebted for my first appearance into public life. And whatever beides me in the future, I owe a greater boon than their affection and continued approval. Their loyal support of me in the recent canvass but adds another obligation to those with which I am already oppressed. Amid the open criticism of the public record of my successful opponent was freely and fully made during the campaign. My public record was equally criticized by him. In a republic like ours, and especially in a party like ours, I believe such policy to have been developed to neither, but manifestly for the good of the party. The issue was made up. The people had the opportunity to judge, and the majority vote of the Democrats of the State has been returned for my opponent. I accept it without repining, and am now ready to do battle for the party that I love and that has in the past honored me.

On the same line we may ask, in reference to the salaries of the officers of officers, whether that charge applies to the increase of all salaries; if not, which have been improperly increased? Do they mean that the increase of the salaries of the Attorney-General, the judges of the Supreme Court, our highest tribunal, were improperly increased? Let's have a bill of particulars.

The Republican party has increased its list of representatives and critics of the Democracy because it will not suffer its faithful employees to starve. Which of the expenses of the government, on the same line, I ask, should be curtailed? All of them? If not all, which? Would you abolish the appropriation made for roads last year of $15,000, when we had the money in the treasury to make such appropriation? Would you abolish the increase of $800,000 to the schools of the State, in the face of the management of the State? Would you abolish the increase of $147,000 in 1939 to $560,000 in 1908, gone to equip and enlarge the facilities of our higher educational institutions? Would you cut down the amount now given to the Confederate soldiers of Virginia of $100,000 that amount given ten years ago of $100,000, and deny to these worthy patriots the humble contribution of a grateful people for their splendid services?
